

GOVERNOR'S MANSION, MILLEDGEVILLE

120 South Clark Street, Milledgeville

This distinguished Greek Revival mansion, fronted by a giant-order Ionic portico, was designed by Charles B. McCluskey, who incorporated circular and octagonal spaces in its plan. It served as the home of Georgia governors from 1838, when it was completed, until 1868, when the state capital was moved from Milledgeville to Atlanta. The house is owned by the state and operated by Georgia College as a furnished house museum.
